

Instructions for Reviewers

Review process and classification

The journal uses the conventional “double-blind review”, which means that both the reviewer and author identities are concealed throughout the review process. Upon acceptance, the articles are classified into one of the four standard categories:

- original scientific paper is only the first time publication of original research results in a way that allows the research to be repeated and the findings checked;
- preliminary communication of preliminary but significant results which summarizes the findings of a completed original research work or a research work in progress;
- review article is an overview of the latest works in a specific subject area, the works of an individual researcher or a group of researchers, in which the author’s original contribution to the research of the same topic should be presented;
- professional article is the presentation of what is already known in as specific subject area and does not have to contain the original research results.

Apart from the mentioned categories, Vidici will publish uncategorized non peer-reviewed submissions: short essays, reviews, commentaries, bibliographies, notifications, etc.

Reviewers of the journal Vidici are asked to adhere to the ethical guidelines of scientific writing. (https://ec.europa.eu/info/sites/default/files/6._h2020_ethics-socscience-humanities_en.pdf).

Also, if the Editorial Board makes a wrong assessment and sends reviewers a paper that does not belong to their scientific field, they should inform the Editorial Board as soon as possible. Reviewers fill in the table and descriptive part of the review form. In the descriptive part, reviewers should argue each remark, referring to the part of the paper stating the page number and passage or stating precisely the part of the paper to which they have a remark. Reviewers should return the completed review form within a maximum of two weeks from the date of receiving the paper.

The review form will be submitted to the selected reviewers by the Editorial Board of the journal Vidici. Reviews are submitted in electronic form, with electronic signature or signed and scanned.

Based on the review, the Editorial Board, or the editor, makes a decision on final categorization of the paper, on acceptance, requesting revisions, corrections or rejection. Authors should return the revised or corrected works to the Editorial Board no later than eight days after receiving the comments.
